MALTON (NEW) is a neat and well built market town, and ancient borough, which has sent members to parliament since the reign of Edward 1., but has not a municipal corporation, though it was formerly governed by two bailiffs. It is pleasantly seated on the western side of the navigable river Derwent, 18 miles N.E. of York, 22 miles S.W. of Scarborough, and 214 miles N. by W. of London. It comprises the two parishes of St. Leonard and St. Michael, which contain together only 100 acres of land, and increased their population from 3047 souls in 1801, to 4,173, in 1831, but the Parliamentary Reform and Boundary Acts, of 1832, have added the suburban parishes of Old Malton and Norton to the Borough. Old Malton, on the north side of the town, has 4020 acres, and increased its population from 741 souls, in 1801, to 1204, in 1831. Norton Parish, which is described at page 349, comprises 2510 acres of land, all in the East Riding, being on the opposite side of the river Derwent, and increased its population from 615 souls, in 1801, to 1425 in 1831, thus swelling the total population of the borough in that year to 6802 souls, though in 1801 they only amounted to 4403. Malton is a polling place at elections of the parliamentary representatives of the North Riding, and is the head of a large Union, under the new Poor Law, and of the Malton Division recently separated from the Wapentakes of Bulmer and Rydale, as noticed at pages 399 and 423. The market is held every Saturday, and is well supplied with corn, cattle, and provisions, being numerously attended by the families and farmers from the surrounding country to a great extent. Formerly here were two market days, one on Tuesday being held in the Low street. The present market place is spacious, and is lined with well-stocked shops, as also are the streets leading to it; and on the west side of the town is the cattle market, an open space of three acres, on which Earl Fitzwilliam has lately erected slaughter-houses. Five large cattle fairs are held here annually, viz. during the week before Palm-Sunday, on the Saturday before Whit-Sunday, the Saturday before July 15th, on October 11th and 12th, and on the Saturday before Martinmas-day. The first is famous for the exhibition of horses, and is much attended by south country dealers, especially on the Monday and Saturday, and during the week races are sometimes held. The town stands on a gentle eminence, on the western banks of the river Derwent, which winds through a beautiful and fertile vale, and is here crossed by a handsome stone bridge, of three arches, which connects the town with its neat and populous suburb of Norton in the East Riding. Under the authority of an act, passed in the reign of Queen Anne, the Derwent was made navigable for small craft, from the river Ouse to Yeddingham bridge, nine miles above Malton, (see page 32) and the navigation is the property of Earl Fitzwilliam, the lord of the manor, and owner of most of the lands and buildings in Old and New Malton. Here are several commodious inns, especially the New Talbot Hotel, which has a fine terrace and hanging gardens, forming a delightful promenade, and commanding beautiful views of the vale of Derwent. The town and suburbs have been much improved during the last twenty years, by the erection of new houses; and gas works were constructed in 1832, by Messrs. John and Jas. Malam, who sold them, in 1836, to a company of proprietors, for £4000, raised in £10 shares.

Malton is the site of one of the most ancient Brigantian fortified towns in this part of Britain. The early importance of this station is shown by the number of ancient roads which point to it. The Romans planted here one of the numeri, or cohorts of the Legie, sexta victrix called DERVENTIONENSIS, and changed only the termination of its British name to Camulodunum. This name, by abbreviation, became the Saxon Meldun, pronounced Maiden; and Maiden Greve Balk is at this day one of the boundaries of Malton. The river Derwent here, and at this point alone, touches the foot of the Wolds of the East Riding; a considerable breadth of marshy ground, formerly impassable, intervenes between the river and the Wolds in every other part of its course, so at this point the river was most readily passed by a broad but shallow ford. No fewer than six Roman roads may be traced by military and other remains to this station. Numerous Roman coins, both silver and copper, of various Emperors, for a long period have been, and are yet found here; and on the opposite side of the river, entrenchments for the defence of this once important pass are also visible. Fragments of, and entire urns, some containing Roman coins and fine red ashes, and also many pieces of their pottery, with figures in relief, on paterae pocula, are found here. The Camulodunum of the roman Britons became a royal villa to King Edwin in the Saxon era, and here the life of that monarch was preserved from the assassin, by his faithful Lilla. The great Earl Siward, who defeated Macbeth, was one of the lords of Malton; and after the Norman Conquest, the baronial family of Vesci, built here a castle and a priory for Gilbertine canons, of both which there are remains this day. The Castle was one of those short-lived structures which Henry II. Demolished; but during its existence, the town was burnt down by Archbishop Thurstan, when he laid siege to it to dislodge the Scotch, and the name of New Malton commenced on the re-building of the town. On the site of the castle, Ralph, Lord Eure, built a noble castellated mansion, which he finished at the conclusion of the 16th century; and it is remarkable, that its duration was as short as that of the castle, for his lordship's two grand-daughters not agreeing respecting the property here, the mansion was pulled down, and the materials divided between them, by Henry Marwood, Esq., the High Sheriff of the County of York, in 1674; the lodge and gateway, however, were left as a monument of the folly and vindictiveness of family feuds, or to show what the mansion had been. Mary, the youngest of these daughters, was married to William Palmer, Esq., of Linley, in this county, who, in right of his wife, possessed the manor of Old and New Malton, which he, with others, conveyed to Sir Thomas Wentworth. On the 20th of May, 1728, the Hon. Thomas Wentworth, Knight of the Bath, obtained the title Lord Malton, and six years afterwards was created Marquis of Rockingham. His lordship dying on the 14th December, 1760, was succeeded in his title and estates by his only son, Charles Watson Wentworth, Marquis of Rockingham, who dying without issue, on the 1st of July, 1782, his titles became extinct, but his nephew, Earl Fitzwilliam, succeeded to the Manor of Malton, and his other principal estates. The Earl's land agent occupies the Lodge, and the grounds on which stood the ancient hall, noticed above. Malton was a corporate borough, and governed by two bailiffs, until the reign of Charles II., when a writ of quo warranto, to which the inhabitants pleaded prescription, deprived the burgesses of its privileges, for judgement was given in favour of the Crown, and a new charter has never been applied for. Since that time, the Court Leet, and Court Baron of New Malton, appoint a nominal borough Bailiff and two Constables, and exercise the usual jurisdiction of those courts. Malton sent members to parliament so early as the reign of Edward I.; and at that period the Prior of Malton was elected a representative, who, on his return from parliament, was arrested for debt, but, pleading a privilege of exemption in going and returning from parliamentary duty, he was liberated; this is perhaps the earliest claim of the privilege by a member of parliament. This borough still sends two members to parliament, and until the Parliamentary Reform of 1832, they were elected by the householders, paying scot and lot; the number of voters being about 500. The present representatives are, Lord Viscount Milton, and J.W. Childers Esq.

OLD MALTON, where the PRIORY was situated, is a small pleasant village, about a mile N. of the Market place, and its parish includes also the hamlet of Wycomb, about 2 miles N. by E. of Malton. The Priory, for Gilbertine monks, was founded in 1150, by Eustace FitzJohn, who, with the consent of Wm. De Vesci, his son, endowed it with many lands and churches, as did also the Flamvil and other families, so that at the dissolution the canons possess a yearly revenue of £197 19s 2d. The site of the priory was granted by Henry VIII. To Archbishop Holgate. Old Malton Church (St. Mary) is only a small portion of the nave of the priory church, the choir having been taken down in 1734. The east front is of late Norman workmanship, with some specimens of the lancet style. The west door has a handsome receding arch, composed of the capitals of seven columns, attached to each jamb. The capitals are leaved, and the shafts are slender. The mouldings show a beautiful specimen of the lozenge, highly enriched; also, the chevron and the diagonal flower, all apparently executed in the 12th century; but the arch is walled up, and has a modern doorway in lieu of the ancient entrance. The interior, in its original state, has been very large, and richly ornamented. It is considered as the mother church of NEW MALTON, where the parish churches, or parochial chapels of St. Leonard and St. Michael, are united with it, as a perpetual curacy, now valued at £198. Earl Fitzwilliam is the patron, and lessee of the tithes under the See of York; and the Rev. Wm. Carter, B.A., is the incumbent, for whom the Rev. Wm. Pound officiates at Old Malton. S. Michael's Church, situated in the Market place, is a large Anglo-Norman structure, much mutilated, and having a fine tower at the west end. St. Leonard's Church comprises a nave, a north aisle, chancel, and a tower at the west end, surmounted by a spire, which has been left unfinished, in the form of a truncated cone. The chancel and tower were repaired in 1806, and the outer walls and roof rebuilt in 1807. The churchyard was enlarged, and the vestry rebuilt, in 1815, at the expense of the late Earl Fitzwilliam, whose successor, the present Earl, has contributed largely towards the erection of a new parsonage house, about to be erected, at the cost of £1200. Service is performed alternately at the two churches, and the other places of worship in the town are the Unitarian, Independent, Baptist, and the Wesleyan and primitive Methodist chapels, and a room occupied by the Roman Catholics for whom a chapel is about to be built by subscription. The Free Grammar School, at Old Malton, was founded, in 1547, by Robert Holgate, Archbishop of York, who endowed it with lands and tenements, then worth £20 a year, and which had previously belonged to the priory here. The endowment now consists of an allotment of 2 ½ acres of land, awarded to the school premises, at the enclosure of Old Malton moor, and £92 10s per annum, in five rent charges, out of land at Sutton Grange, Ebberston, Ryton, and West Heslerton, awarded at enclosures in 1769 and 1770, in lieu of the lands and tenements given by the founder who directed that the school should be free, for Greek, Latin, and Hebrew, to all boys of Old and New Malton. The Archbishop of York appoints the master, and that office is now held by the Rev. Wm. Pound, who has improperly perverted the school premises to other uses, and since 1835, has conducted the school in a building adjoining his residence, in Norton parish; and he now allows £20 a year to the master of the National School, which was built in Old Malton, in 1836, by subscription. In New Malton, are two National Schools, one for boys and the other for girls, an Infant School, built in 1837. The Theatre, and a handsome suite of Public Rooms, form a neat and commodious structure, in Yorkersgate, built in 1814; but the theatre was converted to a Mechanics' Hall, in January 1839, under the patronage of Earl Fitzwilliam. The Mechanics' Institute has already about 200 members, and a library of 800 volumes. In the public rooms is a large subscription library and news room, and accommodation for balls and assemblies, and for the shows of the Malton Horticultural Society, formed in 1834. Here is also a Savings' Bank, which has now deposits amounting to about £34,000, belonging to about 1200 individuals, 10 friendly societies, and 5 charitable societies. A Clothing Society, and some other charitable institutions, are liberally supported by the contributions of the inhabitants. The poor of Old Malton have a yearly rent charge of £5, out of land at Rillington, left by one Spencer. Those of New Malton have 20s a year, out of a house in Low street, left by an unknown donor. About a quarter of a mile S.W. of the town, is a chalybeate spring, similar to those at Scarborough. Petty Sessions are held every alternate Saturday, in the town Hall, a plain building, in the Market place. The Workhouse, in the Low street, was erected in 1735, principally at the expense of the Wentworth family, and was enlarged in 1789. In 1837, it was sold to the townships forming the Malton Union, (see page 424,) for the sum of £1332, and it has since been enlarged, and divided into wards, for the better classification of its inmates. John Topham, a learned antiquary, who died in 1803, was a native of Malton, which has produced several other worthies, and has in the list of its former representatives in Parliament, the names of Edmund Burke, Henry Grattan, and some other senators, distinguished for eloquence, learning, and liberality.
